Monthly update

After a surprisingly good reporting season and thus a strong trading month in April, the markets did an "about-face" in early May. The direct cause was a tweet from President Trump announcing new tariffs on Chinese goods due to inadequate progress in negotiations on a trade agreement between the two countries. Investors, who were under the impression that negotiations were progressing, were completely unprepared for this. The United States then imposed an embargo on the Chinese IT giant Huawei, denying them access to US technology from suppliers like Google and Intel. The tone grew notably sharper between the two countries during the month, and at the time of writing no new negotiations have been announced.

As if this were not enough to raise concerns about broader economic developments and the potential negative impact on a wide range of companies, a new tweet from President Trump concerning tariffs on Mexican goods appeared at the end of May. According to the tweet, Mexico had not done enough to stop illegal immigration from South and Central America into the United States. This too had a major impact on stock markets, not least in the automotive sector.

Good news was in short supply even in other parts of the world, but global stock markets were not affected to any great extent. In the United Kingdom Theresa May announced her resignation, making the continuation of the Brexit process even more unclear than it already was.

In the European parliamentary elections, the outcome was mixed. On the one hand, the populist parties did not advance as much as many had feared, while on the other, the Greens in Germany and France, considered to be averse to growth, turned out to be the big winners.

Overall the world index fell by 5.8 percent in May, measured in euros. All sectors noted downturns, with information technology, energy and raw materials at the bottom. All regions fell, with China falling the most, followed by Europe and the United States.

FUND PERFORMANCE

The fund decreased by 0.6 percent in the period, measured in its main share class IC1 (EUR), and decreased by 1.1 percent measured in its RC1 (SEK) class. A broad healthcare index, MSCI HC, was down 1.9 percent measured in euros.

The fund's best contributors in May were Novocure and Iovance Biotherapeutics. The worst contributors were Alexion Pharmaceuticals and Ambu.

Novocure is a US medical device company that has developed a new technology for the treatment of cancer. The company's technology uses electromagnetic fields within a specific frequency to disrupt cell division and thus inhibit tumor growth. In addition to previous approval for the treatment of glioblastoma, the company received further approval for its treatment of mesothelioma, an aggressive form of lung cancer. Several studies are ongoing within other cancer indications, and investors are starting to seriously wake up to the company's potential to further broaden the field of application. The stock performed strongly during the month and is also the fund's best contributor so far this year.

lovance is a US biotechnology company specializing in the development of new cancer immunotherapy using the body's own tumor-infiltrating lymphocytes (TIL). A TIL is a type of cell whose purpose is to identify and actively destroy tumor cells. In the middle of the month, the company presented interim data for two studies, one on melanoma and one on cervical cancer. The results indicated a 38 percent ORR (overall response rate, i.e. a reduction in tumor size) in melanoma patients and a 44 percent ORR in cervical cancer patients. The market was pleasantly surprised by the results of the study, not least because there is speculation that the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) will grant accelerated approval for the company's treatment of cervical cancer. Following these positive updates, the company's share price rose sharply during the month.

Alexion is a US biotechnology company specializing in rare diseases. The company's flagship product, Soliris, is approved for the treatment of patients with severe chronic diseases, including paroxysmal nocturnal hemoglobinuria (PNH), atypical hemolytic uremic syndrome (aHUS) and generalized myasthenia gravis (gMG). Once again, during the month investors began to fret over future Soliris patent expirations for Soliris, new competition in the form of biosimilars (copies of biopharmaceutical products) and new therapies. In April, the first Soliris biosimilar was approved in the Russian market. Due to the current concerns about increased competition, the share price traded down during the period.

Ambu is a Danish medical technology company that has pioneered the development of single-use endoscopes. In pace with increased awareness of sterilization issues when reusing endoscopes, disposables have gained ever greater acceptance. In a market dominated by the Danish company within single-use bronchoscopes, this has resulted in increased interest in the area, not least from the current market leaders in traditional endoscopes who want to defend their positions. During the month Ambu's CEO Lars Marcher left the company for unknown reasons, and the new CEO Juan-José Gonzalez, took over. This management change created concern among investors, who see an increased risk that the company's outlook will be adjusted downwards. As a result, the share price fell.

OUTLOOK

The fund performed relatively well during the month as the stock market calmed down after its recent volatility. This was partly the result of a share price recovery for stocks that had taken a nose dive in April, such as insurance companies, but was also the result of successful selection of stocks in general.

We take an increasingly positive view of the outlook for the sector. While stock markets have fallen as a result of poorer economic prospects and concern over trade wars, we see that our sector is fairly isolated from these issues, and we also see signs that the bigger companies in the healthcare sector are able to cope well with market jitters. Biotechnology fell in May, but we are convinced that biotech companies that continue to show progress in research and make commercial breakthroughs will perform well going forward.

The political turmoil surrounding the US healthcare sector has been significantly dampened now that Joe Biden has pulled ahead of Bernie Sanders in the opinion polls. We interpret this as meaning that the Democrats will find it difficult to win the presidential election based on a massive overhaul of the US healthcare system. We see this as a contributing factor to positive outlooks for both the short and the medium term. In combination with low valuations, fertile conditions therefore exist for the fund to rise, albeit that volatility may remain high due to the market's belief in an increased risk of recession. Fortunately, the underlying demand in our sector has relatively low dependence on economic activity as a whole, and it should be able to fare better than most other sectors in the event of growing widespread pessimism.

Legal Disclaimer

Rhenman Healthcare Equity L/S. "The Fund" is not an investment fund as defined in the European Union directives relating to undertakings for collective investment in transferable securities (UCITS). Legal information regarding Fund is contained in the Prospectus and the KIID, available at Rhenman & Partners Asset Management AB (Rhenman & Partners) webpage: <http://rhepa.com/the-fund/prospectus/>.

This material has been prepared by Rhenman & Partners for professional and non-professional investors. Rhenman & Partners when preparing this information has not taken into account any one customer's particular investment objectives, financial resources or other relevant circumstances and the opinions and recommendations herein are not intended to represent recommendations of particular investments to particular customers. This material is for informational purposes only and should not be construed as an offer or solicitation to sell or buy units the Fund. Investors is strongly recommended to get professional advice as to whether investment in the Fund is appropriate having regard to their particular investment needs, objectives and financial circumstances, before investing.

All securities' transactions involve risks, which include (among others) the risk of adverse or unanticipated market, financial or political developments and, in international transactions, currency risk. There can be no assurance that an investment in the Fund will achieve profits or avoid incurring substantial losses. There is a high degree of risk inherent in investments and they may not be suitable for all eligible investors. It is possible that an investor may lose some or all of its investment. The past is not necessarily a guide to the future performance of an investment. The value of investments may fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount invested. Changes in rates of foreign exchange may cause the value of investments to go up or down.

Before making an investment decision, an investor and/or its adviser should (i) consider the suitability of investments in the Fund with respect to its investment objectives and personal situation and (ii) consider factors such as its personal net worth, income, age, risk tolerance and liquidity needs. Short-term investors and investors who cannot bear the loss of some or all of their investment or the risks associated with the limited liquidity of an investment should not invest.

Due care and attention has been used in the preparation of this information. However, actual results may vary from their forecasts, and any variation may be materially positive or negative. Forecasts, by their very nature, are subject to uncertainty and contingencies, many of which are outside the control of Rhenman & Partners.
