MONTHLY UPDATE

High inflation, geopolitical tensions or a deepening energy crisis which is worst? This summer was marked by a pessimistic mood and thus low exposure to risk assets. However, this gradually changed, and July's strong stock market was partly driven by better-thanfeared earnings but perhaps above all by the perception that the US Federal Reserve would slow the pace of interest rate hikes, a socalled pivot. When this hope was dashed at the end of August, world markets took a nosedive, washing away the positive momentum. In addition to renewed interest rate worries, investors focused on other concerns such as geopolitics and energy shortages.

A harsh message from Jackson Hole

At the annual central bank conference in Jackson Hole, US Fed chair, Jerome Powell, gave an unusually concise speech. The message was clear - and harsher than many had expected. Powell stressed the importance of the continued fight against inflation, and thereby fueled expectations of continued major benchmark rate hikes not only in the US but also in Europe. The realization that inflation was here to stay, at least in the medium-term, also spooked bondholders, sending up long-term interest rates at the end of the month.

Potential gas rationing a cause for worry

For the sixth month, Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine continued. Although investor interest in the military conflict itself appeared limited, choked gas supplies emerged front and center as a result. Gas prices in Europe increased sharply becoming several times higher than a year ago. The likelihood of rationing increased further, with potentially negative repercussions for households as well as

Increased unrest in Asia resulting from Pelosi's visit to Taiwan

In Asia, too, the geopolitical temperature rose when US Speaker, Nancy Pelosi, visited Taiwan. She was the highest-ranking politician to visit the island in many decades. Beijing perceived the visit as a provocation and began extensive military exercises around Taiwan. This raised the question of China's ambitions to incorporate the island into the mainland. In addition to the risk of a military conflict, investors worried about what this would mean for Taiwan's central role as a global supplier of semiconductors.

Mixed results for global markets

The world index, in US dollars and euros fell. The differences between sectors and regions were significant: energy stocks performed best by far, followed by utilities, while healthcare and information technology recorded the biggest declines. In terms of regions, Hong Kong and Tokyo showed gains while Europe recorded the biggest declines.

FUND PERFORMANCE

In August, the fund decreased by 1.1 percent in its main share class IC1 (EUR). The positive sentiment seen in July persisted during the first few weeks of August. However, fresh concerns about a weaker economic outlook with lower growth, especially in Europe, together with the Fed chair's message that the new higher interest rate level was expected to persist for a longer period, caused all markets to fall back towards the end of the month.

Among the subsectors, biotechnology added to fund returns during the month while other subsectors detracted from returns. Key clinical data and several acquisitions boosted the performance of biotech companies. The best contributors of the month were Alnylam Pharmaceuticals and Shockwave Medical. The worst contributors were Horizon Therapeutics and Sanofi.

Alnylam Pharmaceuticals' stock rose with successful phase III trial

Alnylam Pharmaceuticals is a US biotech company that develops new drugs based on RNA interference. The discovery of RNA interference, in which double-stranded RNA can regulate gene expression, was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine in 2006. Alnylam has successfully developed three drugs, all of which are based on the principle of regulating gene expression: Onpattro for the treatment of hereditary amyloidosis, Givlari for acute hepatic porphyria, a condition in which a lack of an enzyme affects liver function and Oxlumo for primary hyperoxaluria type 1, a severe form of kidney stones The company has a broad, balanced research portfolio including an expansion of the use of existing products, in addition to new drug candidates that address high cholesterol, hemophilia and high blood pressure, among other disorders.

In August, Alnylam presented data from APOLLO-B, a phase III trial that evaluated the efficacy of Onpattro (patisiran) in patients with heart failure caused by hereditary amyloidosis. The results were well received by the market and the stock rose sharply.

Quarterly numbers positively impacted Shockwave Medical

The US medical device company Shockwave Medical was one of the fund's top contributors in August. The company is a pioneer in intravascular lithotripsy (IVL) technology for the treatment of calcified arteries, for which the lack of treatment options has been great.

The technology is based on a similar sound wave mechanism that has been used for several decades to break up kidney stones. It combines a catheter-guided balloon with sound pressure waves to crack calcium outside of the cell membrane without damaging soft tissue. IVL is approved in peripheral artery disease and coronary artery disease. In coronary indication, the company received FDA approval last year in the US market. After a strong launch, the company has been able to show triple-digit growth over the past six quarters. Shockwave once again presented strong quarterly sales in August, sending the share price up 40 percent during the month.

Horizon Therapeutics' stock down following revised sales forecast

Horizon Therapeutics is a US pharmaceutical company specializing in rare diseases. The company's revenue comes from Krystexxa, for the treatment of refractory gout and Tepezza, an IGF-1R inhibitor for treating thyroid eye disease caused by excessive thyroid hormone levels. Both products have a strong growth profile driven by a significant medical need and few alternative therapies. Tepezza had sales of 1.7 billion dollars last year, representing growth of just over 100 percent.

When it announced its second-quarter report, Horizon said that while the long-term sales outlook for Tepezza would remain at 3.5 billion dollars, product growth was expected to be lower than previous estimates for this year and next year, causing the stock to plummet.

Disappointment in Sanofi's phase III trial

Sanofi is a global pharmaceutical company based in France. The company has a well-diversified business, with a broad product portfolio of drugs in several major disease areas. They also have vaccine and consumer care businesses. The company's major growth engine, Dupixent, is an antibody that treats atopic dermatitis (eczema) and severe asthma. Dupixent currently accounts for slightly more than 18 percent of total sales and the share looks set to grow in the coming years.

Sanofi has a stated goal to reduce its dependence on Dupixent in the future, so the company now conducts intensive research in areas such as cancer, inflammation and neurology. The disappointment was thus great when the phase III trial involving the company's new drug for breast cancer, amcenestrant, failed to show adequate clinical efficacy to be a successful drug. Sanofi's stock had already recorded a decline because of heightened concerns about the outcome of its ongoing product liability litigation over Zantac earlier in the month and the stock came under additional pressure with the trial results

OUTLOOK

Disputed drug price reform now enacted law in the United States

The most important news with an indisputably positive impact on the sector outlook for the coming years is that the long-disputed drug price reform in the US has now been enacted into law.

The reform is estimated to cost the industry up to roughly 29 billion dollars annually. Federal authorities will, in the future, be able to negotiate lower prices for the biggest drugs within the framework of Medicare, the healthcare program for senior citizens. Private markets will only be indirectly affected, where the new, lower prices for Medicare might spill over and affect the pricing in other segments.

The drugs in question lack generic competition and have been on the market for at least nine years for small molecules (i.e. tablets), and for 13 years for biological (i.e. injectable) drugs. Initially, the ten drugs that burden Medicare's budget the most will be affected, starting in 2026. Thereafter, the number of drugs covered by the reform will gradually increase every year. The expected price reduction is estimated to a minimum of 25 percent over the first three years and then gradually increase up to a minimum of 60 percent.

How are the companies affected?

Effects at company level will of course vary depending on the portfolio composition in terms of technology (small or large molecule) and the products' time on the market. While AstraZeneca and GlaxoSmithKline are more exposed, a company like Roche has low exposure in the short term. Through its focus on large molecules, biotechnology has gained a remarkably favored position with 13 years of non-interference. In addition, orphan drugs without new indications are completely excluded.

Pharmaceutical companies will still set prices freely at market entry, so newly launched products are likely to be priced higher at launch in the future in order to compensate for the lower-than-average expected return on investment. Additionally, it will not be possible to raise the price to Medicare by more than the increase in the consumer price index without incurring penalties. The negative impact on profit levels in the pharmaceutical industry is estimated to be around three to four percent by 2030. The biggest risk of the new legislation, possibly, lies in even greater price reductions in the future now that a working model has been found.

How will patients be affected?

A part of the reform was to cap annual out-of-pocket costs for patients at 2,000 dollars starting in 2025. This will make prescription drugs more affordable for more patients and, not least, enable them to complete their treatments without putting themselves into financial straits. These higher volumes are expected to partially compensate for the lower prices.

Will the reform be stable over time? We think so. It will be implemented over the next four years but with possible minor changes (probably improvements) for the industry. However, we look forward to a midterm election that does not put drug prices at the center of intense political debate. The pharmaceutical industry seems to be on the verge of becoming less politically risky, almost exactly 30 years after the then first lady Hillary Clinton became the investigative officer. We believe that biotechnology and pharmaceutical companies are likely to get an upgraded valuation in the coming year – at long last!
