MONTHLY UPDATE

Rising interest rates, escalating geopolitical conflict and the risk of energy shortages – how weak can the economy (and thus the stock market) get? Following a summer of rising stock prices, investor sentiment quickly turned sour already back in August as hopes of an easing monetary policy were dashed. Jerome Powell, chair of the US Federal Reserve, put the fight against inflation in the spotlight at the annual central bank conference in Jackson Hole. This raised concerns of weaker economic development going forward.

Benchmark interest rates raised worldwide

In September, this became an even more overarching theme as many central banks around the world raised their benchmark interest rates with the stated goal of taming high inflation. Shares in highly valued growth companies, and sectors sensitive to business cycles and interest rates, fell sharply during the month. Most stock markets and sectors recorded annual lows.

Economic developments were worrying

Concerns that weaker levels of economic activity would impact corporate profitability also grew as several profit warnings were announced, not least from the global logistics company FedEx. So far this year, negative earnings revisions have been relatively modest but investors feared an increase as the economy weakened further.

Russia's war continued to shake the world

The level of conflict in the war intensified in September. Following a period of successful counter-offensives by Ukraine, Russia responded by calling "referendums" in the Donbas region and declared at the end of the month that these areas should henceforth be considered part of the Russian Federation. Thus, Russia believes it can use all the means at its disposal to defend "its territory".

At the same time, the natural gas pipelines Nord Stream 1 and 2 in the Baltic Sea were sabotaged as the Russian company Gazprom cut off supplies via other pipelines, citing legal disputes.

Even though gas reserves are now relatively well stocked, the EU is trembling ahead of a cold winter, and the Commission took a decision to launch an energy-saving program.

Stormy UK bond market after Truss tax cut proposal

The United Kingdom, which has not been on investors' minds very much since the Brexit vote in 2016, once again became the subject of interest as the pound and the British bond market plummeted. Newly appointed prime minister Liz Truss and her chancellor Kwasi Kwarteng announced major unfunded tax cuts, causing a widespread disruption in the pricing of British government securities, gilts. The Bank of England felt compelled to intervene to defend the pound and buy bonds.

A heavy month for world stock markets

Global market indices thus declined in September. All sectors recorded declines, albeit with some major differences. Less cyclical sectors such as healthcare and consumer staples fared better, while information technology and industrial enterprises saw the biggest declines. All major regions fell in September. The United States and Europe performed equally weakly, but Tokyo and Hong Kong, relative winners in recent months, performed even worse.

FUND PERFORMANCE

In September, the fund decreased by 3.1 percent in its main share class IC1 (EUR). Individual companies, primarily in the pharmaceutical and biotechnology sector, added to returns but all subsectors decreased on an aggregate level. Sentiment for biotechnology strengthened thanks to positive clinical trial news, in particular through successes in Alzheimer's disease treatment. However, the increased volatility created a greater sensitivity to negative news. The turmoil on the stock market as a whole, colored by high inflation figures and central bank interest rate announcements, weighed down the fund's returns.

The best contributor of the month were Revance Therapeutics and Regeneron Pharmaceuticals. The worst contributors were Jazz Pharmaceuticals and Vitrolife.

Approval of Daxxify provided tailwinds for Revance Therapeutics

Revance Therapeutics is a US biotechnology company that has developed its own formulation of botulinum toxin for both aesthetic and therapeutic indications. In September, Daxxify (daxibotulinum toxin) was approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for the treatment of glabellar lines (worry wrinkles). Revance has demonstrated that Daxxify, with its peptide-stabilized formulation, achieves a long-acting effect so that the treatment efficacy lasts an average of six months. Although there is no study that has shown a statistically significant difference, this would mean a prolonged effect of about two months compared to established botulinum toxin products. The company is now preparing to launch Daxxify. Revance stock increased by just over 35 percent during the month.

Longer market exclusivity for Regeneron's Eylea Regeneron is a major US biotechnology company. Its revenue heavily relies on the sales of Eylea, which is approved for the treatment of eye diseases caused by excessive levels of the growth factors VEGF-A and P1GF. In September, the company presented data from two major phase 3 trials in wet macular degeneration and in macular edema caused by diabetes, both of which showed benefits when patients were treated with a four-fold higher dose of Eylea. With this higher dose, the interval between treatments can be extended from eight up to sixteen weeks while maintaining clinical efficacy measured as preserved visual acuity. For Regeneron, this means that it can enjoy market exclusivity for Eylea for a longer period. Regeneron's share price increased by nearly 20 percent during the period.

Jazz Pharmaceuticals share price fell due to changes in estimates

Jazz Pharmaceuticals is a small US pharmaceutical company specializing in rare diseases. The majority of the company's revenue comes from products that treat narcolepsy, a chronic neurological disease characterized by disruptions in the regulation of wakefulness and sleep. Following its acquisition of GW Pharmaceuticals last year, Jazz now has the only epilepsy drug based on purified cannabidiol that is also approved by the FDA. Jazz is determinedly working to broaden its product portfolio and thus reduce its dependence on one individual drug.

However, a US investment bank lowered its forecast for Epidiolex in September to the level of consensus estimate. In line with many other companies, the share price reacted strongly to what was perceived as negative news.

Vitrolife down on news of CEO departure and research note

Vitrolife is a market leading global fertility company. The company boasts a broad product portfolio including consumables, instruments and technology that cover the entire IVF process from egg retrieval to embryo transfer. Like many other growth companies with high valuation multiples, Vitrolife has seen its share price more than halve since the beginning of this year.

The stock was one of the fund's worst contributors during the month. When the company's long serving CEO announced in September that he intended to retire, the share price fell sharply. Thereafter, a negative research note from a major US investment bank caused further price drops. In our opinion, the report is somewhat flawed. One example concerns the competitive landscape in Asia, where the analysis omits key details about competitors' product portfolios.

OUTLOOK

The war and its consequences for the global economy in terms of both supply and demand have overtaken previous concerns about pandemic-related bottlenecks and lockdowns in China. The possible – and no longer entirely hypothetical – risk of the use of nuclear weapons is paralyzing risk appetite and driving increasing risk aversion in financial markets. Equally, tightening central bank policy and skyrocketing electricity prices in Europe are creating powerful headwinds for the financial markets which are very difficult to assess in terms of effects and timelines.

Companies with high exposure to the US are benefitting

Defensive stocks in large companies with a high exposure to US markets are currently outperforming because of the strong dollar. We take notice and try to use opportunities to participate. The United States is likely to curb inflation before other countries do as the dollar strength leads to lower prices of imports. Once the Fed achieves the interest rate level deemed effective for curbing inflation and inflation expectations, the US equity markets should be the first ones to rally.

The war continues to cause concern

The fund is coping relatively well in the current state of affairs, albeit not well enough to prevent our sectors' high-multiple companies from continuing to negatively affect performance. When things turn around, however, these companies should be poised to rally first and most strongly. We believe that a recovery in the fourth quarter is likely, assuming of course that the war does not escalate. The most probable scenario, in our opinion, is that the intensity of the war will taper off during the winter and create somewhat better conditions for the stock market. In addition, inflation is likely to come down later in the year, at least in the United States. A certain amount of caution is called for, not least as a result of the negative earnings revisions that we can very likely expect in the near future.
