MONTHLY UPDATE

The positive momentum persisted into February, traditionally a challenging month for markets. Contrary to expectations, stock prices increased despite rising bond yields, catching many investors by surprise. Again, the US mega caps dominated trading and performance attribution with, for example, chipmaker Nvidia rallying after a stellar report to become the third company ever to reach a market cap of USD 2 trillion. Indeed, as the month progressed, the positive sentiment spread wider, reaching more sectors and even small and mid-cap stocks.

Investors ignored the delayed rate cuts

Better-than-expected economic data plus strong corporate earnings especially in the US, meant that investors overlooked the apparent postponing of central bank rate cuts. Going back to late last year, most investment banks envisioned cuts occurring already in March of this year. However, inflation numbers released in February dampened those expectations, pushing possible dates back to May or even later in the summer. Additionally, even though still an outlier opinion, some analysts said that the economy (again especially in the US) was so strong that cuts, if any, would happen even further into the future.

Choosing between a healthy economy and thus earnings growth, or lowered rates, it was obvious that investors favored the former, at least as long as the price of money was stable and expected to ultimately fall.

Worsened geopolitical situation

Geopolitical tensions worsened in February. In Ukraine, Russian forces took the town of Avdiivka in Donetsk after a long siege, making the Ukrainian army, who were outnumbered and in dire need of more western support, to retreat. French president, Emmanuel Macron, suggested that western troops at some point could be deployed in Ukraine, a statement which was seen as an escalation by the Kremlin.

Also, the war in Gaza continued unabated with Israeli forces moving further down towards the southern part of the strip, prompting increased criticism from governments and citizens around the world. Despite Israel being urged to halt the fighting, prospects for a cease-fire were still distant, even though negotiations continued. Leaders of Hamas in Gaza and Fatah in the West Bank assembled in Moscow to try to forge a common stance against Israel.

Local measures bolstered Chinese markets

Having underperformed the world equity indices for years, Chinese stocks rallied in February after the authorities introduced several measures to bolster the market, including a ban on short selling and certain quant strategies.

In Japan, the world's best performing major market so far this year, the benchmark index finally surpassed its all-time high reached back in 1989.

Fourth consecutive monthly rise for the world index

The strong start to 2024 thus continued in February and the world index rose for a fourth consecutive month, albeit again with differences depending on investors' base currency. Apart from utilities, all global sectors rose, led by consumer discretionary and information technology, while consumer staples and energy trailed the market. The same went for the regions, with Hong Kong and Nasdaq at the forefront while Europe lagged the world index.

FUND PERFORMANCE

In February, the fund increased by 4.7 percent in its main share class IC1 (EUR). The month was characterized by positive contributions from all sub-sectors. Notably, the fund's holdings in biotechnology contributed particularly strongly during the month. The fund had a couple of positive read-outs and approvals in February. The best contributors were Viking Therapeutics and Iovance Biotherapeutics, while the worst were Medtronic and Inspire Medical Systems.

Viking staked a claim in the obesity market

The company reported Phase 2 data from the VENTURE trial, where lead asset VK2735 demonstrated a more than 13 percent weight loss after 13 weeks. Coupled with a relatively benign safety profile, the data represented close to a best-case scenario for the company as it now prepares for clinical development into later phases. These results underscore Viking as a potential player in the growing obesity market where VK2735 offers a competitive subcutaneous treatment option. The stock price reacted accordingly and soared in February.

Iovance secured cell therapy approval

Lifileucel, now commercially known as Amtagvi, was finally approved by the FDA for use in advanced melanoma after many years of challenges, which made it the first cell therapy to be approved for solid tumors. It exploits tumor infiltrating lymphocytes (TILs) to attack the tumor.

This was very welcome news for melanoma patients who have limited treatment options once the standard of care fails. The focus now lies on supporting healthcare systems with the initiation of Amtagvi treatment. The approval was encouraging for the whole cell therapy field and Iovance's stock rose markedly in the month.

Medtronic's earnings triggered varied market reactions

Medtronic, one of the largest medical technology companies, recently announced its fiscal third-quarter financial results, triggering varied market reactions. Despite a strong stock performance in the preceding three months, the company faced a setback because its earnings report failed to meet the high expectations set by investors. With no clear earnings outlook provided for fiscal 2025, the stock fell slightly during February.

Inspire earnings pointed to negative seasonality during Q1

The company offers an implantable neurostimulation devices for treatment of patients suffering from obstructive sleep apnea. Early in February, Inspire presented its earnings report which triggered a mixed bag of reactions among investors. The company highlighted both positive and negative aspects during its earnings presentation. They noted headwinds in the coming quarter in terms of seasonal effects. Adding to the uncertainty, the upcoming readout from Eli Lilly's SURMOUNT-OSA data, potentially in the springtime, could cause some GLP-1 concerns for procedure volumes in the future. Consequently, investors sold off shares in February.

OUTLOOK

In February, the market experienced further expansion where an increased number of stocks participated. Particularly, the biotechnology sector, measured as XBI, showed a strong upward trend given a long phase of consolidation. Recent data indicate strong healthcare productivity. February underlined the potential for 2024 to be a strong year for the healthcare sector.

Stock markets compensated by economic growth

Inflation is not on its way down as quickly as some had hoped but the economy is growing rapidly which compensates stock markets, and risk appetite is increasing. Europe is still behind, but our estimation is that it is only a matter of time before Europe turns around too.

The consumer price index in the US indicates continued rising housing costs but much of this appears to be built in lags and seasonal patterns. If housing costs rise more slowly in the spring, the US central bank (the Fed) will be close to its target and can start lowering interest rates. Our assessment is that the American stock market should remain strong if investors continue to believe that rates will come down in the summer at the latest, and if the first quarter's reports in April-May show that the strong economy has provided decent profit growth. A possible weakening of the labor market during the spring could create new concerns about the economy, however we do not see strong signs of this today.

Optimistic sentiment

A series of data and phenomena can still go wrong, but the current optimism is fairly well anchored in profits, macro- and stock market statistics. The healthcare sector is generally strong and has the necessary prerequisites to deliver in 2024. Insurance is really the only area where, at present, there is broader uncertainty. The sector has undeniably started the year strongly and, as previously stated, the conditions exist for it to continue doing so during the year ahead. The proof is in the pudding.

This material is for informational purposes only and should not be construed as an offer or solicitation to sell or buy units in the Fund. Investors are strongly recommended to get professional advice as to whether investment in the Fund is appropriate having considered particular investment needs, objectives and financial circumstances before investing.

All securities' transactions involve risks, which include (among others) the risk of adverse or unanticipated market, financial or political developments and, in international transactions, currency risk. There can be no assurance that an investment in the Fund will achieve profits or avoid incurring substantial losses. There is a high degree of risk inherent in investments and they may not be suitable for all eligible investors. It is possible that an investor may lose some or all of its investment. The past is not necessarily a guide to the future performance of an investment. The value of investments may fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount invested. Changes in rates of foreign exchange may cause the value of investments to go up or down.

Before making an investment decision, an investor and/or its adviser should (i) consider the suitability of investments in the Fund with respect to its investment objectives and personal situation and (ii) consider factors such as its personal net worth, income, age, risk tolerance and liquidity needs. Short-term investors and investors who cannot bear the loss of some or all of their investment or the risks associated with the limited liquidity of an investment should not invest.
